++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine, warm weather in northwest slowly gaining ground.

Today:
Some southern and eastern areas of England seeing a lot of cloud and scattered showers, though a few warmer, brighter spells too. Further west and north, some warm sunshine and just an isolated shower, especially over western hills.

Tonight:
Many areas dry with some clear spells in places but low cloud and misty conditions for some. Still a few showery outbreaks possible in the southeast.

Wednesday:
Showery rain in the southeast fading but perhaps staying cloudy and rather cool. Elsewhere some warm sunshine as cloud burns back towards coasts but isolated heavy showers in southwestern UK.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Some fine, warm weather for many at first, although low cloud affecting some areas, especially overnight and mornings. Showery rain spreading to many southern and central areas by Saturday.
